RICHARD
(waving at smoke)
The smoke, the cigarette...

RENÉ THROWS CIGARETTE OVERBOARD AND RESUMES ROWING.

RENÉ
Richard I wish to say something to you. In sincerity. But I do not know if you will believe the word of this Pinocchio. This liar.

RICHARD
I am sorry. I want to apologize. I...

RENÉ
No. Please. It is nothing. What you say about my work, it does not rise above a thing that is banal. But I do not believe it is a representation of my soul. Now I will speak words from my heart.

SO SAYING, HE RAISES THE OARS AND LETS THE BOAT DRIFT.

I hope you will allow me to tell you I love your mother very much. She is the delight of my life. My intention is to marry her. I offer you the promise that I will do all in my power to make her happy. As she makes me happy now. Richard, I hope to be for you a father. I do not speak of Norman. I grasp what he meant to you. But know this: I will work to make up this loss, and I will make the attempt to be a good parent. I hope that in the course of time we shall perhaps respect each other and experience love among the members of our family.

RICHARD
What do you mean, respect? Love? Don’t make me laugh. I saw you on San Remo Drive. I saw you through the window. Kissing her. Touching her. I know you’re living in sin.

INSTEAD OF REPLYING, RENÉ PICKS UP THE OARS AND BEGINS TO ROW IN EARNEST.
RICHARD TWISTS ABOUT TO PEER BACK AT THE DISTANT SHORE.

Where are you going? You’re going out, you’re not going in. I can’t even see the shore. I can’t see Lotte any more.

LOTTE

Yoo-hoo! Yoo-hoo!

SHE BACKS OUT OF SIGHT.

RICHARD

Stop. This is far enough.

RENÉ

(still rowing)

Far enough for what?

RICHARD

For what you’re going to do.

RENÉ PULLS THREE MORE TIMES ON THE OARS, THEN SHIPS THEM.

RENÉ

Yes. It is far enough.

BRIEF PAUSE AS BOAT DRIFTS.

It is a pity. I have offered you friendship. But you make a mockery. I row, you know, to release the anger in my arms. These arms.

HE DISPLAYS THEM.

You are a boy, a child, nothing, Richard. There is in you no experience of life. But in your work, that is where you are already a man. And in the work of poor René? Much life. Little talent. When he looks in the mirror: a clown!

HE PULLS NOW ON JUST ONE OF THE OARS, SO THAT THE BOAT BEGINS TO SPIN ON ITS AXIS. WITH HIS FREE HAND HE PULLS OUT A CIGARETTE AND HIS LIGHTER. HE PUTS THE CIGARETTE IN HIS MOUTH BUT DOES NOT STRIKE A FLAME.

Now, Richard, you will attend my words. This Mademoiselle Madeleine—

RICHARD

Don’t mention her name!

RENÉ

This petite jeune fille, eh? The little neighbor girl. You will tell me how you persuaded her to take off her clothes.

HERE HE MAKES A FLAME BUT DOES NOT BRING IT TO THE TIP OF THE CIGARETTE. THE TWO OF THEM STARE AT THE BURNING WICK.

RICHARD

I know that trick. The flame. You want to hypnotize me.

RENÉ draws up the oar and ships it. Then he gets to his feet, towering over the boy.

RENÉ

Oui. L’hypnotisme. Ecoutez! On your feet.

AS IF HYPNOTIZED, RICHARD OBEYS.

Turn around.

RICHARD turns, so that his back is toward the Frenchman. He hunches his shoulder, to await the blow.

Don’t budge yourself.

RICHARD

You’re going to kill me!

RENÉ lights the cigarette, blowing smoke past the boy. Then he quickly darks by him and takes his place in the stern.

RENÉ
Now sit.

RICHARD STILL STANDS.

Ha! Ha! I am a bad hypnotist. Now sit!

RICHARD DOES SO.

We will have, you and I, a future together. You will teach me from your knowledge the secrets of art. Perhaps one day, in a future we cannot know, the works of René will hang on the gallery walls. And I? I will teach you. My friend, you have much to learn. So. Straighten your arms. Lean from the waist. Up. Lift the arms up. Now dip them. Pull! Pull! Pull for la Californie!

AS THEY APPROACH THE SHORE LOTTE APPEARS, WAVING.

LOTTE
Here I am! Over here! Did you have fun, my darlings?

THE TWO MEN PICK UP THE BOAT AND CARRY IT TO THE BEACH, SETTING IT BY HER FEET. SHE EMBRACES RENÉ. THEY LINK ARMS, LAUGHING, AND RUN OFF, UPSTAGE LEFT.

LIGHTS BEGIN TO DIM. YOUNG RICARD REMAINS AT THE EDGE OF THE OCEAN. THE ADULT RICHARD SPEAKS FROM HIS POSITION DOWNSTAGE LEFT, LOOKING AT THE BOY AS HE DOES SO.

ADULT RICHARD
Was I right? Did I read this Frenchman’s mind? Did he wish to kill me? Or had I projected my own thoughts onto him? I did not know. For a moment I stood there, baffled, while the waves broke about my feet.

YOUNG RICHARD AND OLD RICHARD BOTH LOOK DOWN AT THEIR FEET. THEN THE ADULT RICHARD RESUMES.

I saw them break into pieces, like a hundred thousand beads of mercury that soon re-assembled themselves beneath what seemed to me the shining mirror of the sea.
RICHARD, THE BOY, RICHARD THE MAN, BOTH RAISE THEIR EYES TO LOOK OUT TO THE SEA.
